

PROFESSOR E. W. STEWART.

NUTRITION FOR THE YOUNG CALF.
Many dairy men are deterred from feeding calves because they think whole milk necessary to raise a good calf. Such persons have not studied the nature of food. It is true that milk, as it comes from the cow is exactly adapted to the growth of the young calf, and that when any essential element of the milk has been separated from it, it has so far lost its perfect character of food. In butter-making the cream is taken from the milk, and the residue consists of casein, whey or milk sugar and the mineral elements. But these remaining elements are the most valuable in milk. If, now, we can supply the oil which has been skimmed off, with something of less value than the cream, but having the same feed value to the calf, we are practicing true economy. The cream from the milk to supply a vigorous calf is worth 21 cents per day, at least, and sometimes 30 cents. Now this can be supplied for four cents in the oil from boiled flax-seed, and the flax-seed also contains a large proportion of albuminoids and the mineral constituents necessary to grow the muscles and bones of the calf. I have tested this so many times, and with such uniform success, that I can recommend boiled flax-seed as a full complement for the cream taken off.

A calf then may be fed skimmed milk when one week old, with the addition of one gill of boiled flax-seed, increasing this ration gradually to a pint per day when four weeks old, and then adding fine middlings or corn and oats unground. Flax-seed gruel with plenty of skimmed milk will produce a very fine growth, leaving the calves as mellow to the touch as if sucking the cow. I have produced a growth of over three pounds per day, upon calves two months old upon this ration. The oil taken off in the cream can be replaced for one-fifth of the money value of the cream. Butter dairymen may raise a calf, to each cow, upon the skim milk and a little additional food, such as indicated, and get one-fourth to one-third as much profit out of the refuse milk as out of the butter. Selling butter robs the land of nothing valuable only carbon which has no manurial value.

LEMON JUMBLES.—One egg; one cup of sugar; one-half cup of butter; three teaspoonsful of milk; one-half teaspoonful of soda and one of cream-of-tartar; juice of two small lemons, and the grated rind of one; mix well.

GERMAN PUFFS.—Three beaten eggs; three cups of milk; three teaspoonsful of melted butter; three cups of flour; a small spoonful of salt; pour into nine well buttered cups, same size as used in measuring; bake to a fine brown and eat as soon as done with sauce.

At times so little to make children at home, that it is a wondrous sight to see many little ones are miserable, if not easy, or discontented. If for an hour after the evening meal the father give himself to his children, who wear mother wear out so fast, or the child be so lawless, troublesome, uncomfortable for what a ministry for to both parties is a papa's fooling the babies! What an interest for to the books, the drawings, the play, or even the stinkies if the father get into them!

Aside from the children, and in the home where there are none, men have a more correct part to play than they are ready to bear, in making daily life pleasant. We hardly say that a man should set the example for the family in patience, cheerfulness, forbearance, and the comfortable moods and graces that are the soul of home happiness. The men who display all their snappish politeness on the street or at the business places, and save the stormy sulks, and sourness, and all the brood of devilish dispositions that characterize by the convenient custom of "moods"—well, we have opinion of them; and if they will change in private, we don't mind expressing it privately; but we are afraid they would not look well in print!

The whole tribe of home tyrants, men who make the entire household revolve around them as the axis, whose tongues are cruelly cutting in the morning, and uerres so in the evening that the family nunsilence while they read and smoke who "can't bear" the noise of in an natural mirthfulness; who to be undoted and tended and who they ought all of them to be to pass their days in a shabby boarding-house, without sight of children—with hash for breakfast, warmed-over pancakes for breakfast, lean mackerel and centennial tea supper, with the lodger overhead always learning the trombone and want girls that steal the hair-oil, who don't deserve a home, and no man who will do nothing to make it his man's rights do not include the right

the work, or worry or self-satisfaction or thoughtfulness and well-doing dependent to its creation and maintenance.

A good many men think they do their full duty if they pay the more or less grudgingly. But one as well try to warm a corner, to place and a pair of silver-plated spoons, and no fuel or fire, as to have home with money. The money makes a place for the home; to complete it the man must put in the best part of himself at the

—LESLIE O. MILLET.

Millet has often been recommended as a forage plant, for when it comes to advantages as it can be sown in the season when the other crops are out of the way. It may be sown upon ground and then for pure forage, or it may be sown on land with a barley or grass as being a better nature sufficiently for forage. Common millet will ripen its ears in sixty days after sowing, and then make good hay, besides being a very good feed for the pig, or, if grown, excellent to eat, or other grain, feed to the pigs. The seed of millet is not the crop costs to raise, leaving it for a profit. As the crop can be raised and harvested at seasons of the year when other crops are less the farmer's time, its culture is easier. It is an excellent crop upon a stubble piece of ground, out weeds, such as tustles, dock, or if the lands well plowed, a surface made melow, the millet soon shade it through the weeds, and when other crops are sown, a little nature on the land harrowed in with the seed will double the crop. Time should be allowed the seed to ripen before the crop may be run through a threshing machine, or if bound up into bales, threshed with flails to separate the seed from the husk of seed is also for an acre.

The Golden or German millet is best for a forage plant and res corn in its growth, as it grows broad, coarse like lent. The straw is soft and edible. The seed is of aquires neutral. The seed sown in the spring, and should, in a no latitude, be sown by the first of For forage alone it may be

THE ARTIFICIALITY OF DISEASE.—Among the artificial diseases are increases in the circulation of the blood, an unnaturally attenuated condition of the physique, indicating that the life current is deficient in nutritive properties, a wan, haggard look, inability to digest the food, loss of appetite, sleep and strength, and a cessation of the natural functions. All these may be regarded as among the indices of approaching disease, which will eventually attack the system and overwhelm it, if it is not built up and fortified in advance. Inevitably, then, without loss of time, making choice of the greatest violating agent extending to the Stomach, Sufferers, an elixir which has given health and vigor to myriads of the sick and debilitated, which is avouched by physicians and analyzed to be pure as well as effective, which is immensely popular in this country, and extensively used abroad, and which has been for years past one of the leading medicinal staples of America.

KEEP YOUR LIVER HEALTHY, and thus ward off many distressing complaints, by using "Swaine's Tar and Sassaaparilla Pills."  Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate
 broken-down and low-spirited horses,
 by strengthening and cleaning the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases
 of the stomach and intestines, such as LENG
 EVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW TAIL, HEAVES, COUGHS, DIS-ORDERED DIGESTION, POOR IN-CRESS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves
 the food, increases the appetite, gives a smooth and glossy skin and transforms the animal into a creature
 of fine looking and sprit-and-horn.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Brucella, Hollow Horn, &c. It has been proven by our experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them a fine, sleek skin, and makes them more profitable.

In all cases of Swine, such as Coughs, Hives in the Loins, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one to three papers to a pig, and giving water, the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely cured. Give it at the same time, a certain preventive
 and you are the Rice Choker.
